9. Old Business: none

10. New Business Action Items Submitted by COL Leaders: Discussion on conference presenters “do they pay”? (15 minute allotment)

    Jennifer: List of concerns with having presenters pay:
    ➢ No other conferences she has presented at have asked her to pay. If they had, she would not have presented. Some have even offered her a free booth & some small gifts.
    ➢ The overall quality of speakers/presenters
    ➢ Types of presenters/speakers, specifically those who would not normally attend ICA. The concern is that we would be limiting our pool of speakers/presenters and those who would attend.
    ➢ (she feels that) If they’re attending the full conference they should pay. If they are only presenting during breakout sessions then they should not have to pay.

    Kristin: has a question as to whether or not the distinguished presenters/speakers need to pay.
    ➢ -They do not need to pay and ICA gives each division $200 to use toward their distinguished speaker.
Melanie (IACES): Why do we have it structured for presenters to pay?

Sue: shared a few things/reasons she has heard regarding Melanie’s question-
   1.) We are part of ACA & that's how they do it
   2.) As a professional, it is a way of giving back to the association
   3.) The financial piece

Sean:
    ICA typically has 60 to 90 presenters per year, which would mean that’s $6,000-18,000 that the association would be losing out on
    Has contacted all of ACA’s state branches to find about what they have been doing in regards to having presenters pay (15 responded- the majority require their presenters to register). We are comparable to how other states are doing this.
    The Conference Committee has recommended that we continue to charge full conference fee for all presenters. They’re open to offering some sort of discount in the future.
    Regarding the concern about the possible reduction in proposals: this year, the committee had to reject 20% of the proposals that were submitted due to the amount of time and space available.

Kendal stated that the Conference Committee is within the context of the bylaws with regards to their decision.

11. Next Meeting: January 29, 2014 5:30 p.m.

*Please note the meeting time is different than originally scheduled.
   • It will be held the night before the conference and is an official meeting, therefore official reports need to be submitted prior to that meeting.
   • Menus will be sent out once the restaurant is confirmed. COL and division presidents will have dinner provided. Division presidents- Please contact Kendal or Sean ASAP if you are planning to have your president-elect attend (space is limited).
